

Planning births help babies survive

Research in poor communities has shown that timing of births can make a massive difference to the chance of both mother and baby surviving

