

Southern Africa faces severe drought

The drought threatening Southern Africa affects not only the maize crop but also vital hard currency earners such as cotton, tobacco and sugar.

An estimated 11.5 million tonnes of grain will need to be imported this year

