

Bosnian Serbs approve peace plan

The 'parliament' of the self-styled Bosnian Serb state has approved the first stage of the Vance-Owen peace plan. The plan divides the republic into ten largely autonomous provinces, but rules out acceptance of the self-proclaimed Serbian state that Serbian forces have been trying to create in Bosnia-Herzegovina

