

Cot deaths fall dramatically

Cot deaths were more than halved last year following a £2 million Health Department TV campaign advising parents to put their babies to sleep on their backs, rather than on their stomachs. The recommendations also included advice about not overwrapping babies, not smoking near them and contacting a doctor if the child seemed ill

Sudden infant death syndrome: rate per 1000 live births in England and Wales

