

Fire and ice threat from Icelandic volcano

Massive flooding is expected along Iceland's south coast as the eruption beneath Europe's largest glacier continues to melt the ice sheet. The area is uninhabited but barriers are being erected to preserve vital bridges and power stations

Around 1.9bn cubic metres of ice has melted into lake. As level rises, increased pressure will force off ice cap, releasing torrent