

Gulf War syndrome

A report into the health of Gulf War veterans finds that they are more likely to report health difficulties than those who were not sent to the conflict and those who fought in Bosnia. However the investigators conclude there is no proof of a specific Gulf War syndrome – a single cause of the problems

Gulf War veterans: 65% more likely to show signs of chronic fatigue and post-traumatic stress disorder than other soldiers

Other soldiers