

The new millennium is upon us but we're not living in moulded plastic cubicles and driving anti-gravity hovercars... yet.

Future visions have been many and varied – from a life in cyberspace to an existence among apes. See if you can name all the films featured in the montage and answer the more difficult questions below

1. The Domesticon Robot looks strange – yet familiar. Name the film, its star and the object he is holding

2. Harrison Ford played Richard Deckard – Blade Runner (retired), in the seminal 80s sci-fi film-noir. But who or what do Blade Runners seek out?

3. The Captain and crew of the Starship Enterprise have boldly trekked where no man has trekked before, but in how many movies?

4. In 1926, Fritz Lang's Metropolis was a special effects triumph of its time, but which famous producer and musician released a version in colour in 1984?

5. John Connor teaches Arnie a handy little catchphrase for 90s America in Terminator 2: Judgement Day. What is it?

6. The big blue diva concealed all four element stones in Luc Besson's film The Fifth Element. Where did she hide them and what is the fifth element?

7. Uma Thurman is beyond suspicion in the movie GATTACA – she's a "valid". But why is her lover an "invalid"?

8. The writer of this tense 70s sci-fi film, The Andromeda Strain, had a "monster" hit in 1993. Name that film and the writer

9. In 2001: A Space Odyssey, Dave has a problem with the ship's paranoid computer. What is the computer's name?
