

Preventable killer

Breast cancer is responsible for one in five of all female cancer deaths in the western world, mainly affecting women after the menopause. Mammography – a low-dose X-ray which can detect breast cancer up to two years before any lump is large enough to be felt – is offered to women age 50 and older

Health groups say mammography should be made available to women over the age of 40