

World oil production nearing a peak

As global demand for oil continues unabated, mankind may be facing the prospect of “peak oil” – when, in theory, production reaches a high point and then declines – heralding the end of our reliance on cheap energy

OIL AND GAS LIQUIDS: 2004 scenario

Source: Association for the Study of Peak Oil and Gas

© GRAPHIC NEWS