

Opium eradication undermined by Taliban

Afghanistan's record opium production, expected to reach 8,200 tonnes this year, clearly displays the sharp divide between the stable centre and north and the provinces of the south where Taliban insurgents – in control of large swathes of territory – have encouraged opium cultivation to soar

