

S. Africa mine rescue

Rescuers are evacuating 3,200 workers trapped underground in a South African gold mine after power lines to their lift were severed. Miners are being brought out through an adjacent shaft, but only 75 can be hauled out at a time

2,200m down

The map shows the outline of South Africa in light yellow, with surrounding countries in light grey and the ocean in light blue. A black diamond with a bullseye symbol marks the location of the Elandsrand mine in the northeast, near the border with Mozambique. A vertical line connects this symbol to the text 'Elandsrand mine: Miners trapped 2,200m down'. The city of Johannesburg is marked with a black dot and labeled below the mine location. The words 'SOUTH AFRICA' are printed in large, bold, grey capital letters across the lower half of the map.
