

Disease risk follows China quake

The fight against contagious diseases is now a top priority for nearly five million homeless people living in makeshift tent cities. One week after the 7.9-magnitude earthquake, officials raised the death toll to 32,476 and said at least 10,000 others remained buried, presumed dead

