

Standard model – structure of the universe

Particle physicists believe that matter – everything created in the universe by the Big Bang about 14 billion years ago – is made up of 12 types of fundamental particle and six force carriers. These building blocks, which cannot be broken down any further, make up the Standard Model theory

