

Georgia conflict threatens oil supplies

Alarm is growing that escalating fighting between Georgia and Russia poses a threat to strategic pipelines that deliver oil and gas from the Caspian Sea to Europe and the United States

Pipelines under threat

1 Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan: Dubbed the pipeline for peace, the $3 billion BTC opened in 2006. Owned by BP-led consortium including U.S. oil giants Chevron and ConocoPhillips
Capacity: 1.2 million barrels/day

2 South Caucasus gas pipeline:
Operated by BP, 692km pipe transports gas from Azerbaijan's offshore fields.
Capacity: 20bn cubic metres/year

3 Baku-Supsa oil pipeline: 830 km pipeline and terminal cost $556m and was completed in 1999.

Capacity: 145,000 barrels/day

4 Baku-Novorossiysk oil pipeline:
Underused following dispute between Russia and Azerbaijan. Russia controls 1,100km of 1,330-km pipeline.
Capacity: 100,000 barrels/day
