

Oil price threat to renewables

The crash in the price of oil has produced a major negative impact on alternative energy industries. Ironically, OPEC's plan to return prices to $70 per barrel could be essential to maintain investment in renewables and prevent prices later soaring in the event of no viable alternatives

