

Testing times for Tour riders

Tour de France speeds surged after erythropoietin (EPO) – a drug that boosts the number of red blood cells and enhances endurance – came into widespread use in cycling during the 1990s. This year's Tour will see around 500 tests carried out, with up to 10 riders tested after each stage

Winner's average speed, km/h

