

Korean naval ships clash

Navies from the two Koreas have exchanged gunfire for the first time in seven years, damaging vessels on both sides and raising tensions just days before U.S. President Barack Obama travels to Asia

Northern Limit line:

Recognised by South

Not accepted by North

Near Daechong Island: Officials in Seoul say South Korean naval vessel opened fire when Northern ship crossed disputed sea border. North Korean vessel then fired back. North insists its ship did not cross border
