

Gulf oil spill could enter loop current

Forecasts suggest that the so-called loop current – a fast-moving underwater current from the Caribbean – could carry the Gulf oil spill around the tip of Florida in the direction of the Atlantic Ocean

