

Investment sends HIV/AIDS into retreat

The spread of HIV has turned a corner, with the number of new infections down by almost 20% since its peak in 1999. However, campaigners are warning that investment in education, treatment and support flattened out for the first time in 2009, threatening the progress made to date

