

Australia's flood crisis continues to spread

More than 3,500 people have left their homes in Victoria, as the southern Australian state faces its worst floods in 100 years. Three weeks of flooding have already torn a devastating path through the state of Queensland, leaving 30 people dead and inundating 30,000 homes

