

Volcanic ash cloud grounds flights

Thousands of travellers are facing flight cancellations amid concerns that plane engines could be damaged by particles from the ash cloud spreading from Iceland's Grimsvotn volcano. Some states may decide to close airspace, while others give ultimate responsibility to airlines

ASH CONCENTRATION FORECAST (micrograms per m³) May 25, 00:00GMT

Approval required to fly in medium-high levels

