

Sectarian tensions in Syria's uprising

A wave of killings in Syria's restive city of Homs is raising fears that the country's four-month-old anti-government uprising could be overtaken by violence between the Sunni Muslim majority and President Bashar al-Assad's minority Alawite sect

