

Australia plans world's largest marine reserve

The Australian government wants to establish a huge marine protection zone to safeguard a vast swathe of the Coral Sea. The proposal, subject to a 90-day consultation period, would cover an area more than one-and-a-half times the size of France

