

New Zealand volcano

Mt Tongariro on New Zealand's North Island erupted Monday for the first time in 100 years. Government scientists are expecting heightened activity for several weeks with the ash plume likely to affect aviation

