

Coffee rust epidemic sweeps Central America

The virulent coffee leaf rust fungus "la roya" has spread across Central America, destroying around 20% of the 2012-13 harvest. To tackle the problem bushes must be replanted, with no yield for up to three years, endangering whole economies dependent on coffee exports

