

Today in History

August 25, 1989

▲ After travelling for 12 years and 4.5 billion kilometres, the Voyager 2 spacecraft flew over the cloud tops of the giant planet Neptune and its moon Triton

1967: A new constitution came into effect in Paraguay, now celebrated each year by a public holiday

1973: The first scan was made using CAT (Computer Axial Tomography)

1975: Talks between Rhodesia's white minority government and black leaders opened in railway carriages near Victoria Falls

2006: Fire destroyed the vast main dome of the Trinity Cathedral in the Russian city of St Petersburg