

Obama plans world's largest ocean reserve

The U.S. plans to expand an existing sanctuary in the Pacific Ocean to cover an area of two million square kilometres, doubling the size of the world's fully protected marine reserves

Designated by President George W. Bush as national monuments in 2009

Proposed expansion will extend area off-limits to fishing and mineral exploitation around seven islands and atolls that comprise Pacific Remote Islands Marine National Monument

