Microchip drug-dispensing implant

Scientists in the U.S. have developed a drug-dispensing implant that can release a whole range of medications. One of the first applications will be to administer the contraceptive hormone levonorgestrel

Sources: MIT Technology Review, MicroCHIPS of Lexington, Massachusetts

© GRAPHIC NEWS

and secure. Doctors can adjust dosages remotely