

Today in History

September 13, 1990

▲ A physician investigating the transmission of yellow fever was bitten by a mosquito and died of the disease, thus proving that the mosquito was the carrier

1989: Archbishop Desmond Tutu led the biggest anti-apartheid march in South Africa for 30 years

1994: North Korea allowed United Nations inspectors access to two atomic sites previously off limits

1999: A bomb destroyed a second apartment block in Moscow in five days, killing 118 people

2009: Belgian tennis star Kim Clijsters returned from a two-year layoff to win the U.S. Open