

Today in History

January 8, 1935

▲ Elvis Presley, the “King of Rock and Roll” and one of the great cultural icons of the 20th century, was born in Tupelo, Mississippi. He would have been 80 today

1800: The first soup kitchens for the poor were opened in London as people forced from the countryside by land enclosures moved to the growing city

1995: Argentina’s greatest boxing champion, Carlos Monzon, was killed in a car accident

1998: Scientists said nicotine addiction was related to the release of dopamine, a neurotransmitter chemical in the brain

2007: Astronomers reported the discovery of the first triple quasar