

Today in History

June 2, 2014

▲ King Juan Carlos of Spain, who came to the throne after the Franco dictatorship, announced his abdication after 39 years. He was succeeded by his son, Felipe

1985: English football clubs were banned from playing in Europe following the Heysel Stadium disaster

1992: Danish voters stunned the European Community by rejecting the Maastricht Treaty

2005: Russia and China signed an agreement demarcating the last stretch of border between the two countries

2014: Telangana, India's newest state, came into being after the state of Andhra Pradesh split in two