

Bailouts and austerity fail to help Greece

Five years after the first bailout loan, Greece still has to repay almost €280 billion of private or public debts – just 10 percent less than the debt mountain which triggered its financial crisis

