

Today in History

September 12, 2005

▲ A new $3.2 billion Disneyland theme park, incorporating aspects of Chinese culture and traditions, opened in Hong Kong. It was Disney's first ever resort in China

1910: The world's first woman police officer was appointed in Los Angeles

1935: U.S. millionaire Howard Hughes flew a plane of his own design at 352.46mph to establish the first of his several aviation records

1995: British scientists announced that organs from specially bred pigs could be transplanted into humans

2003: Johnny Cash, country music star, died. He sold 50 million records in a career spanning five decades