

Today in History

August 29, 2004

▲ Michael Schumacher won a record seventh Formula One Drivers' championship. It was also his fifth consecutive title, beating the record of Juan Manuel Fangio

1541: Ottoman forces captured Buda, capital of the Hungarian Kingdom

1831: British scientist Michael Faraday successfully demonstrated the first electrical transformer

1896: Chop suey, inspired by Chinese cuisine, was invented in New York City. It consists of meat or fish and eggs, cooked quickly with vegetables and bound in a starch-thickened sauce

1949: The Soviet Union tested its first atomic bomb