

Berlin market attack suspect killed in Italy

Berlin Christmas market attack suspect Anis Amri has been shot dead by police in Milan, according to Italian state prosecutors

■ June: German asylum application rejected. Attempt to deport Amri fails due to invalid identity papers

■ Dec 19: Berlin truck attack. Amri's identity card found in lorry, giving home town as Tataouine, Tunisia

■ Dec 23: Shot dead in routine police check in Milan. Fingerprints of dead man match those found in lorry

■ 1992: Born in Oueslatia, Tunisia

■ 2011: Involved in armed robbery in Tunisia, travels illegally to Italy to escape imprisonment

■ 2011-15: Spends four years in Italian jail on charge of burning down refugee reception centre. Ordered to be deported on release, but Tunisian authorities fail to complete paperwork

■ July 2015: Arrives in Germany, lives in Baden-Baden and Emmerich am Rhein

■ Feb 2016: Moves to Berlin, becomes involved in dealing drugs. Identified by German police as potential terror threat

