

Today in History

November 14, 1832

▲ America's first horse-drawn streetcar carried public officials on its initial appearance in New York, 12 days before entering regular public service

1922: The BBC began transmitting the world's first daily radio news broadcasts

1925: The first exhibition of Surrealist paintings opened in Paris, France

1994: The high-speed Eurostar rail service entered service, connecting London with Paris and Brussels via the Channel Tunnel

2008: India's Chandrayaan-1 unmanned lunar exploration mission successfully landed on the south pole of the Moon