

Today in History

September 14, 2008

▲ Germany's Sebastian Vettel, 21, won his first Grand Prix, in Italy. Now one of F1's most successful drivers, he is a four-time world champion with over 50 race wins

1868: "Young" Tom Morris scored the first recorded hole-in-one in golf at the Open Championship in Scotland

1975: Rembrandt's painting The Nightwatch was slashed with a knife at Amsterdam's Rijksmuseum

1999: The Pacific island countries of Kiribati, Nauru and Tonga joined the United Nations

2013: The U.S. and Russia agreed to enable the elimination of Syria's chemical weapons stockpile