

Today in History

January 14, 1814

▲ The last Frost Fair was held on London's River Thames. The river was wider and slower, and the winter more severe at that time, allowing the river to freeze over

1794: Elizabeth Hog Bennett became the first woman in the U.S. to successfully give birth by Caesarean section

1814: Under the Treaty of Kiel, Denmark ceded Norway to Sweden

2004: Libya ratified the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban treaty after agreeing to dismantle its nuclear, biological and chemical weapons programme

2004: U.S. President George W. Bush advocated establishing a U.S. colony on the moon