

Davos no-shows reflect world in crisis

Domestic crises will keep several world leaders away from the annual World Economic Forum in Davos, with only three Group of Seven leaders* due to attend the glitzy event

Donald Trump: U.S. president pulls out to deal with partial shutdown of federal government

Theresa May: British prime minister opts to stay at home after stinging parliamentary defeat on Brexit

Xi Jinping: China's leader, who is grappling with slowing economy, sends his deputy

Emmanuel Macron: French president withdraws to respond to gilets jaunes protests

Narendra Modi: India's prime minister skips forum to fight for second term

Justin Trudeau: Canadian prime minister stays away after drawing criticism over C$678,000-cost of 2018 visit

G7 leaders at Davos: Japan's Shinzo Abe, German Chancellor Angela Merkel and Italian Premier Giuseppe Conte
