

Today in History

January 31, 1990

▲ Huge queues snaked through the streets as Russia's first McDonald's restaurant opened in Moscow. At that time it was the largest McDonald's in the world

1930: Britain, the U.S., France, Italy and Japan began the London Naval Conference, aimed at halting the arms race and preventing war

1950: U.S. President Harry Truman announced he had ordered the development of the hydrogen bomb

1955: The first musical synthesizer was demonstrated by RCA

2010: Singer Beyonce won six Grammy Awards, the most won in a single year by any solo female