

Norway votes in “climate election”

Norway, Western Europe’s biggest oil producer, goes to the polls in an election dominated by the issue of climate change, which the ruling Conservative party is widely expected to lose to a Labour-led coalition

POPULARITY OF NORWAY’S PARTIES

Predicted vote share in Sep 2021 election (%)*

(2017 election result)

Labour Party (Ap)

23.9 (27.4)

Conservative (H)

19.1 (25.0)

Centre Party (Sp)

12.7 (10.3)

Progress Party (FrP)

10.9 (15.2)

Socialist Left (SV)

9.2 (6.0)

Red Party (R)

6.7 (2.4)

4.9 (4.2)

Christian Democrats (KrF)

4.8 (4.4)

Liberal (V)

4.7 (3.2)

Green (MDG)

Government parties

Arbeiderpartiet

Sep 13 vote could end bid by Erna Solberg (above) for third consecutive term and allow Labour Party leader Jonas Gahr Støre (left) to negotiate power-sharing deal with left-leaning groups

*According to Kantar for TV2 poll of 2,387 respondents, Sep 7-9, 2021

ipcc

Since publication of UN climate report (IPPC) in August, climate change has been a top issue, with left and green parties seeing poll numbers climb