

Asteroid-crashing mission ready for impact

NASA's DART spacecraft is about to smash into the small moon of an asteroid, in the first test of a technique that could one day be used to deflect a dangerous space rock heading for Earth

DOUBLE ASTEROID REDIRECTION TEST (DART): Mission targets asteroid's moonlet 11 million km away that poses no danger to Earth

