

Libya's deferred presidential ballot

After more than four decades of dictatorship and 10 years of civil war, most Libyan voters want their first-ever presidential election to go ahead after being postponed from December

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES' POPULARITY

Abdul Hamid Dbeibah, 63: Interim Prime Minister of Government of National Accord (GNA). Construction mogul turned politician, leads all candidates in west, east and south

Saif al-Islam Gaddafi, 49: Son of slain dictator Muammar Gaddafi. Wanted by International Criminal Court for alleged war crimes. Says he wants to "restore lost unity." Most support in south

Khalifa Haftar, 78: Leader of eastern coalition of troops and militias known as Libyan National Army. Warlord is backed by Russia, Egypt and United Arab Emirates. Strong support in east

Fathi Bashagha, 59: Former Interior Minister and key player in GNA. Envisages "new Libya" based on justice, respect for human rights and market-led economy. Most support in west, but little elsewhere

*Diwan Research national poll of 1,106 registered voters, December 1-5. Margin of error: 3%

Sources: Bloomberg, Diwan Research, The National

Pictures: Getty Images

© GRAPHIC NEWS