

Today in History

September 29, 1997

▲ U.S. artist Roy Lichtenstein died. A founder of the Pop Art movement of the 1960s, his work was heavily influenced by popular advertising and comic books

1950: The first automatic telephone answering machine was tested in the U.S. by the Bell Telephone Company

1954: CERN, the world's largest particle physics lab, was founded, located near Geneva

2010: Germany made the final payment of its WWI reparations. The total was roughly equal to $400 billion today

2021: Fumio Kishida was elected to replace Yoshihide Suga as Prime Minister of Japan