

Nuclear fusion clean energy breakthrough

Scientists at the Lawrence Livermore National Ignition Facility in California have been able to produce more energy from a fusion reaction than is required to power it — the milestone known as net energy gain

