

North Korea tests sub-launched missile

North Korea is believed to have carried out the first test-firing of “strategic cruise missiles” from a submarine, in an apparent show of force ahead of U.S.-South Korea military drills

Mar 12, Sinpo: Two missiles fired by submarine off coast fly 1,500km in figure-eight patterns before hitting target in Sea of Japan

*North Korea often uses “strategic” to refer to weapons that are nuclear capable

Sources: HI Sutton, Japan Times, MDA, Reuters

© GRAPHIC NEWS