

Britain's housing crisis deepens

Half a century of steady UK home construction decline has led to numbers being at their worst level since World War II – requiring more than four million new homes be built to reverse the shortfall

NEW HOME CONSTRUCTION

Cumulative difference between UK and Western Europe, millions

