

Greenland's centre-right wins election

Voters threw their weight behind a slow approach to independence, electing the opposition Demokraatit party as the winner in a general election dominated by Donald Trump's plans to take over the island

Jens Frederik Nielsen

Demokraatit

Social liberal party, favours gradual approach to independence

Pele Broberg

Naleraq

Centrist-populist party wants immediate divorce from Denmark and have closer ties with U.S.

Múte Bourup Egede

Inuit Ataqatigiit

Ruling party, left-wing, also seeks slow path towards independence

