

U.S. strikes again off Venezuela

President Donald Trump says the United States has struck another small boat off the coast of Venezuela, in what appears to be the fifth attack of its kind on a vessel accused of trafficking drugs

Trump (right) says strikes are necessary to disrupt flow of deadly narcotics, but data shows that vast majority of maritime drug trafficking bound for U.S. moves through Pacific, not Caribbean

DRUG SMUGGLING ROUTES TO U.S.

